

Campus Conversations

August 2, 2011

Over the next several weeks, I will be conducting two-to-three hour meetings in each college on this campus — meetings with deans and with key faculty and staff to engage in dialogue about our university.

My hope is that by early fall, we will create a consensus on areas of focus in our work together. We will discuss how we focus on students as the center of what we do, on 21st century education and outcomes that prepare those students to compete and succeed, and on the kinds of resources necessary to make that happen.

The video message linked below discusses more about the need for that dialogue and consensus as well as other ways to join in the conversation.
